Conduct Training Needs Assessment and Develop Action Plan for developing sustainable institutional set-up for PFM capacity building in the federal structure

1. Background

Nepal has been transformed into three tier governments system from one tier system. The transition has demanded several preparations for effective implementation of the governance structural changes. The reforms have been already adopted to embrace the change in processes, institutions and systems which are in pipeline and the most important dimension is human resource development (HRD) without which all other reforms cannot be materialized. Strengthening the Public Financial Management (PFM) framework is a major priority for the Government of Nepal (GoN) to improve overall governance and public service delivery for ensuring inclusive and broad based sustainable development. The government is committed to strengthen and mainstream PFM systems, processes and institutions of the country. The Public Financial Management Reform Program (PFMRP) Phase I (2009/10-2011/12) was formulated with the objective of adopting a holistic government-wide approach to PFM reforms encompassing both the institutional and technical aspects. PFMRP I specified the areas pivotal to strengthening the PFM practices and systems in Nepal with emphasis on PFM capacity building.

As guided by PFMRP I, a Training Needs Assessment (TNA) was conducted in 2015 on PFM capacity in GoN. The major recommendation of the assessment was that although there are 15 institutions providing training to the government staffs, and particularly two, Revenue Administration Training Centre and Nepal Administrative Staff College providing trainings on PFM, there is need for a dedicated training institution for PFM given the lack of resources and due focus on PFM. As the TNA only indicated overall PFM training needs, it recommended a detailed training need assessment for all relevant entities.

The PFMRP Phase II (2016/17-2025/26) approved in February 2016 further recognizes PFM capacity as the central driver for all the planned PFM interventions. This second phase PFM reform strategy has recognized an immediate prioritized reform action of establishing a specialized PFM institution to enhance the capacity of PFM staffs of the government. The effective implementation of the PFM activities in the federal context depends on availability of adequate capacity at all levels. A comprehensive Training Needs Assessment has been planned that will result in a broad roadmap and action plan to ensure such capacity. The assessment will build on findings and recommendation of the Phase I TNA that has recommended a feasibility study to objectively and rationally evaluate the viability and value addition of the proposed dedicated PFM training institution alongwith the formulation of Capacity Development Plan for PFM.

To enhance the PFM capacity development mechanism in federal context, GoN has recently decided to change the Revenue Administration Training Center as a Public Financial Management

Training Centre (PFMTC). The government envisioned this center as a specialized training center for all kind of PFM capacity building activities. Also, the PEFA Secretariat has recently initiated coordination for implementation of Integrated Public Financial Management Reform Project (2018-2020) for overall PFM reform of the country. With observing the situation of involvement of several institutions that are carrying out PFM training on a piece-meal basis and in an unsustainable manner the IPFMRP has underpinned strengthening PFM training capacity of three tiers of government with establishing and implementing a sustainable organizational mechanism for delivering training in a coherent manner guided by good practices from other countries. So an activity under the IPFMRP is designed with conceptualizing to support the establishment of a sustainable organizational mechanism in the field of public financial management to enhance the skill, knowledge, capacity, ability and competency of PFM staff through conduction of professional and specialized training courses and with an unbroken research to develop institutional memory and knowledge management. An institutional set-up catering to all PFM capacity building needs is envisaged. This setup can be based on partnerships with national and international training institutions for PFM professionalization. Hence, these agendas have formed the intersectional platform for both PEFA Secretariat and PFM Training Center to work collaboratively to achieve the measurable result in the form of a dedicated PFM Training Institution which will be a knowledge hub bringing together and leveraging on various available resource pools.

2. Objectives

The objectives of this assignment are:
